As we leave Salamanca and its lively buzz, we follow the well-indicated scallop shells and we soon find ourselves walking across flat cultivated lands and along endless red earth tracks. The last walking day to Zamora is challenging for its length but, as the first walking days are of short enough distances, anybody with an average level of fitness can do it.

SALAMANCA

Many consider Salamanca as one of the most spectacular Renaissance cities in Europe and its old centre was added to the UNESCO World Heritage list in 1988. As well as being a favourite destination for both Spanish and foreigners, the city also has a strong student culture – the 13th Century university is still in use today!

Day

14.6 km

SALAMANCA -> CALZADA DE VALDUNCIEL

Leaving Salamanca, we enter what is known as La Meseta, the long high plateau of Central Spain. Shade is almost non-existent today as the Camino runs through flat crop fields split by red earth tracks. We have split this leg of the journey into a shorter stage, so it enables you to walk in the cooler first half of the day! At the end of the day, we will arrange a transfer to a hotel in Forfoleda.

Day
19.3 km

CALZADA DE VALDUNCIEL -> EL CUBO DE LA TIERRA DEL VINO

After you are transferred back from your hotel to Calzada de Valdeunciel, you'll notice that today is quite similar to yesterday's walk: crop fields and red earth tracks are the predominant views.

Day
31.3 km

EL CUBO DE LA TIERRA DEL VINO -> ZAMORA

After you are transferred back from your hotel to El Cubo del Vino, you are back into a rural area with views of crop fields and red earth tracks. Towards the end of the day you will finally arrive in Zamora, a pleasant city known as 'The Little Salamanca' due to its lively atmosphere for a place of its size and rich Byzantine and Roman history.

km

ZAMORA

Zamora is famous for its many Roman-style churches, with the city often heralded as the best preserved area of the Romanesque style in Europe! Other sights in the town include the mediaeval Castle of Zamora, while sampling the local gastronomy, including sheep's milk cheese and honey from nearby Sanabria, is a delight for the senses.
